Roberto Angioni

From Sardinia to London, chasing the moment that could change everything.

Change fuels me. Resilience defines me. From farming to marketing and photography my story proves anything is possible.

You just need to believe in it enough.

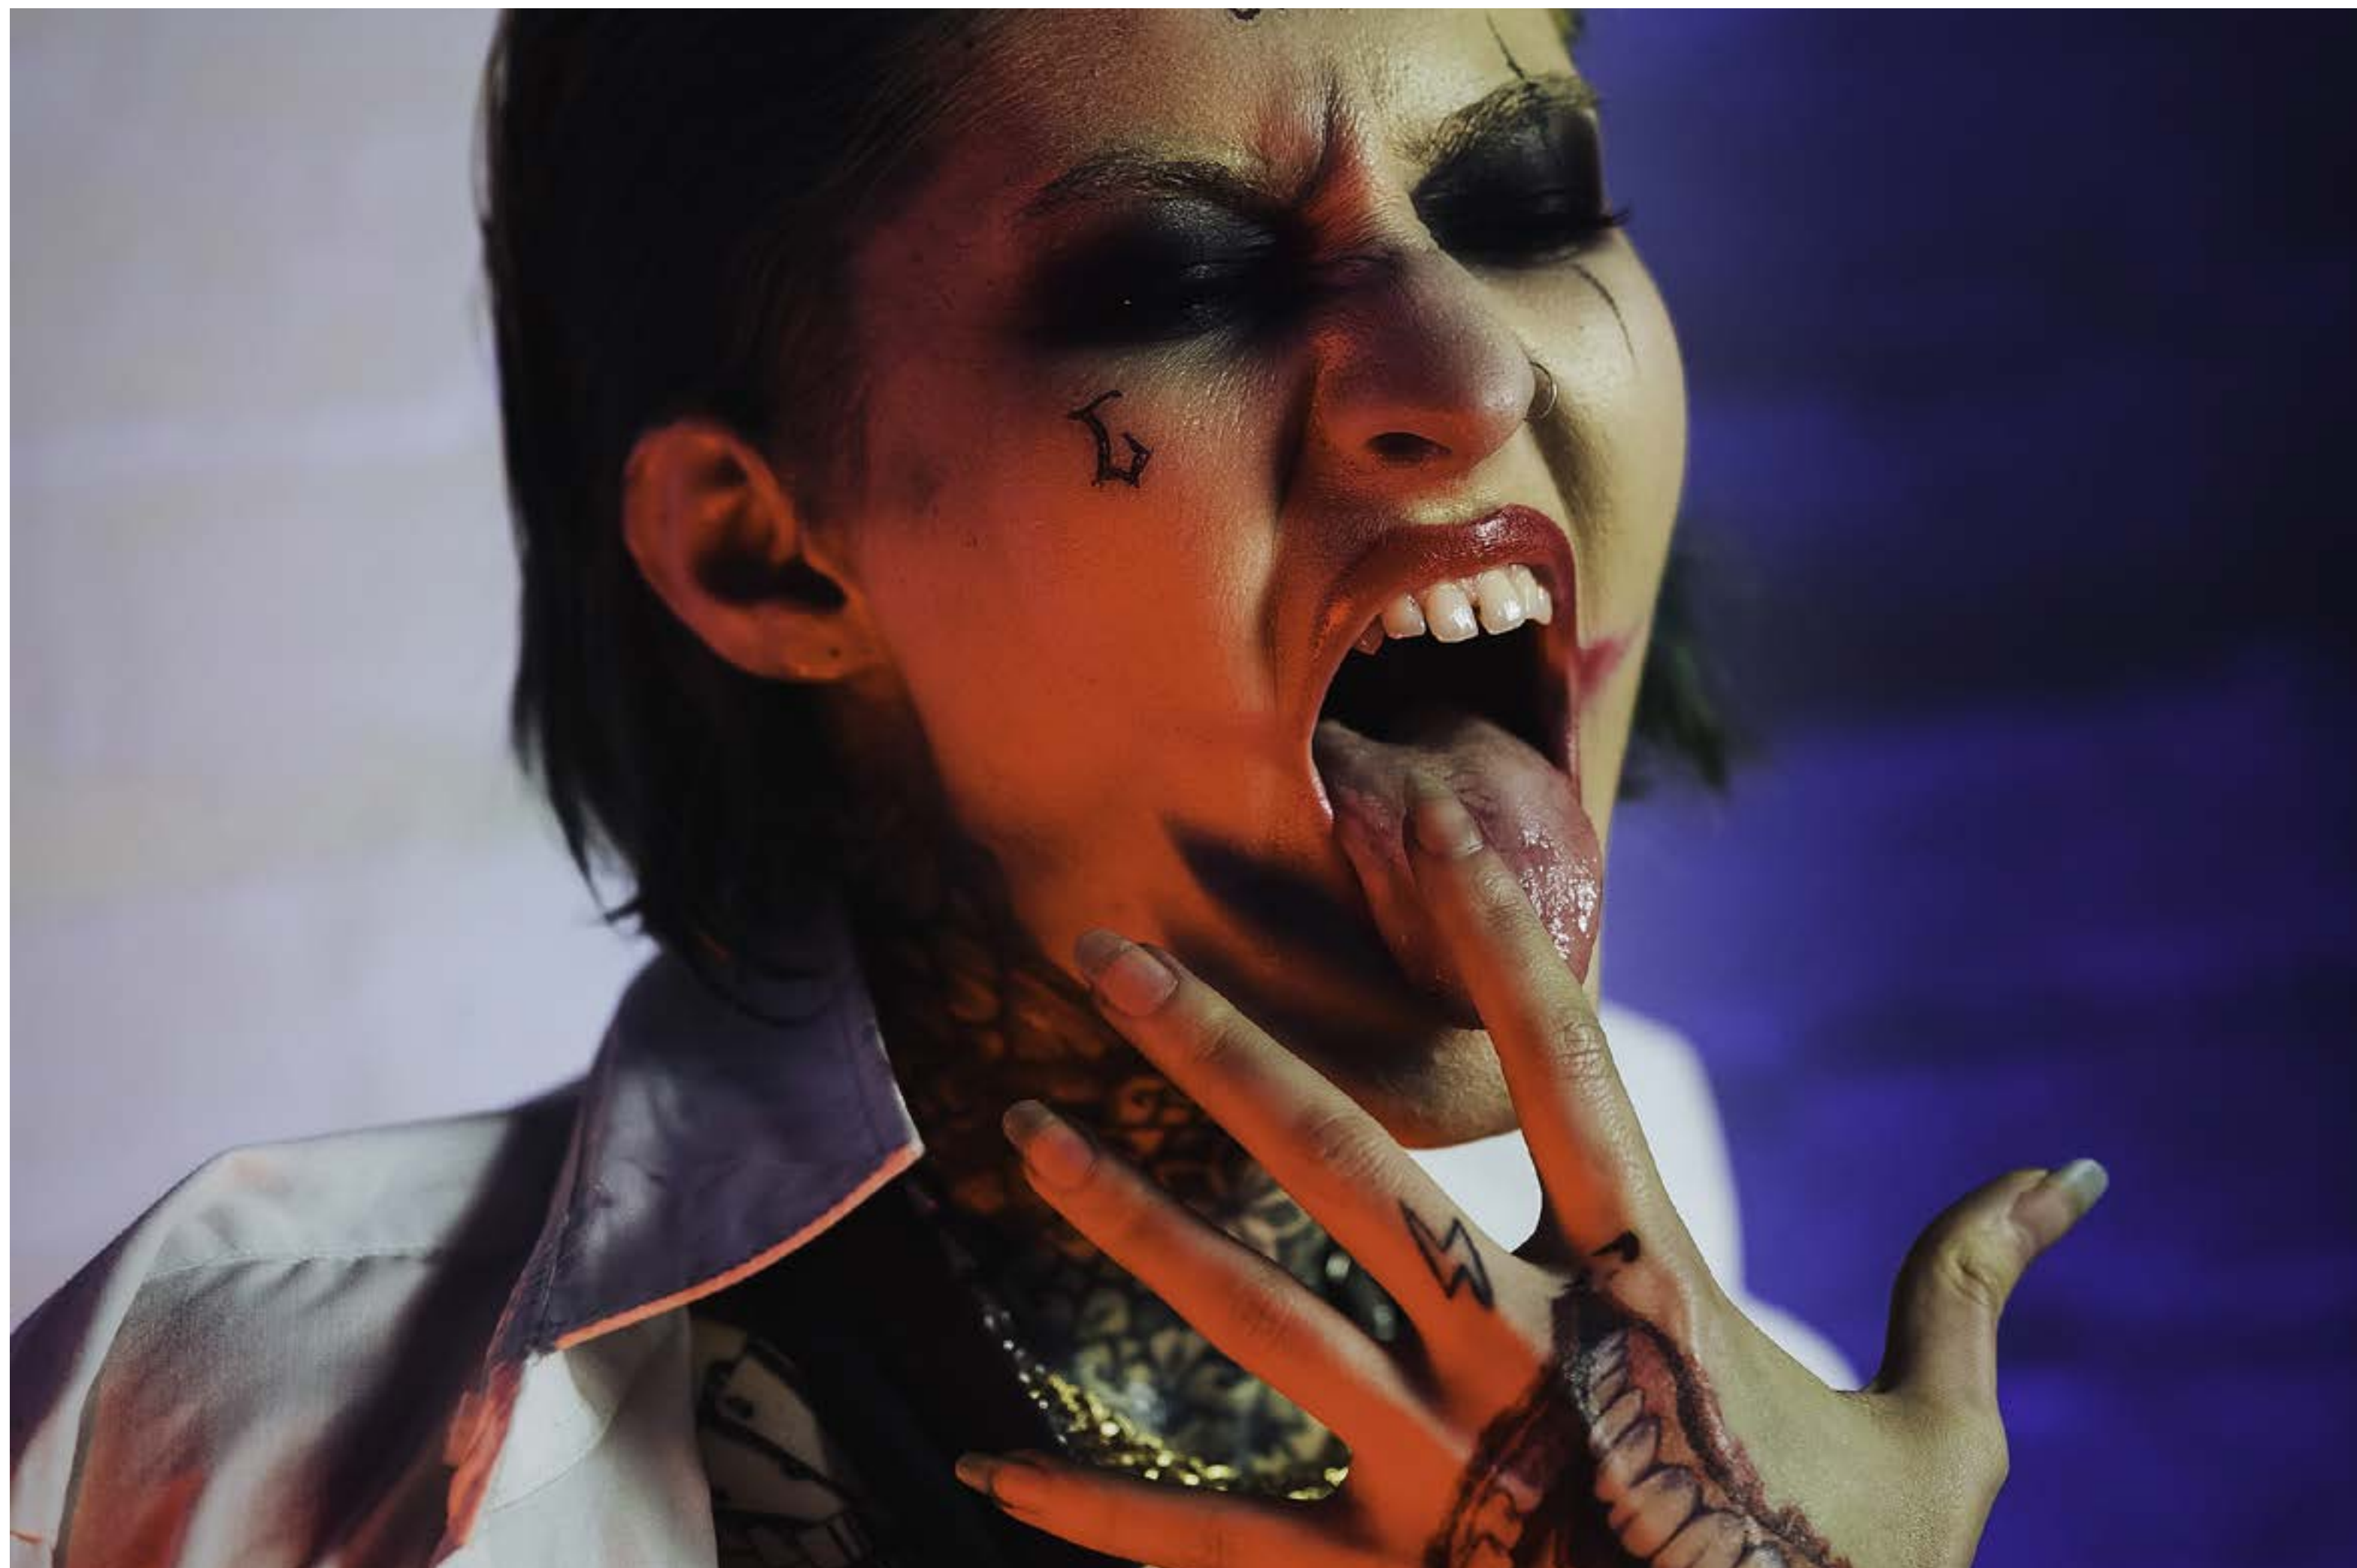

About Me

Halloween with UK Shooters

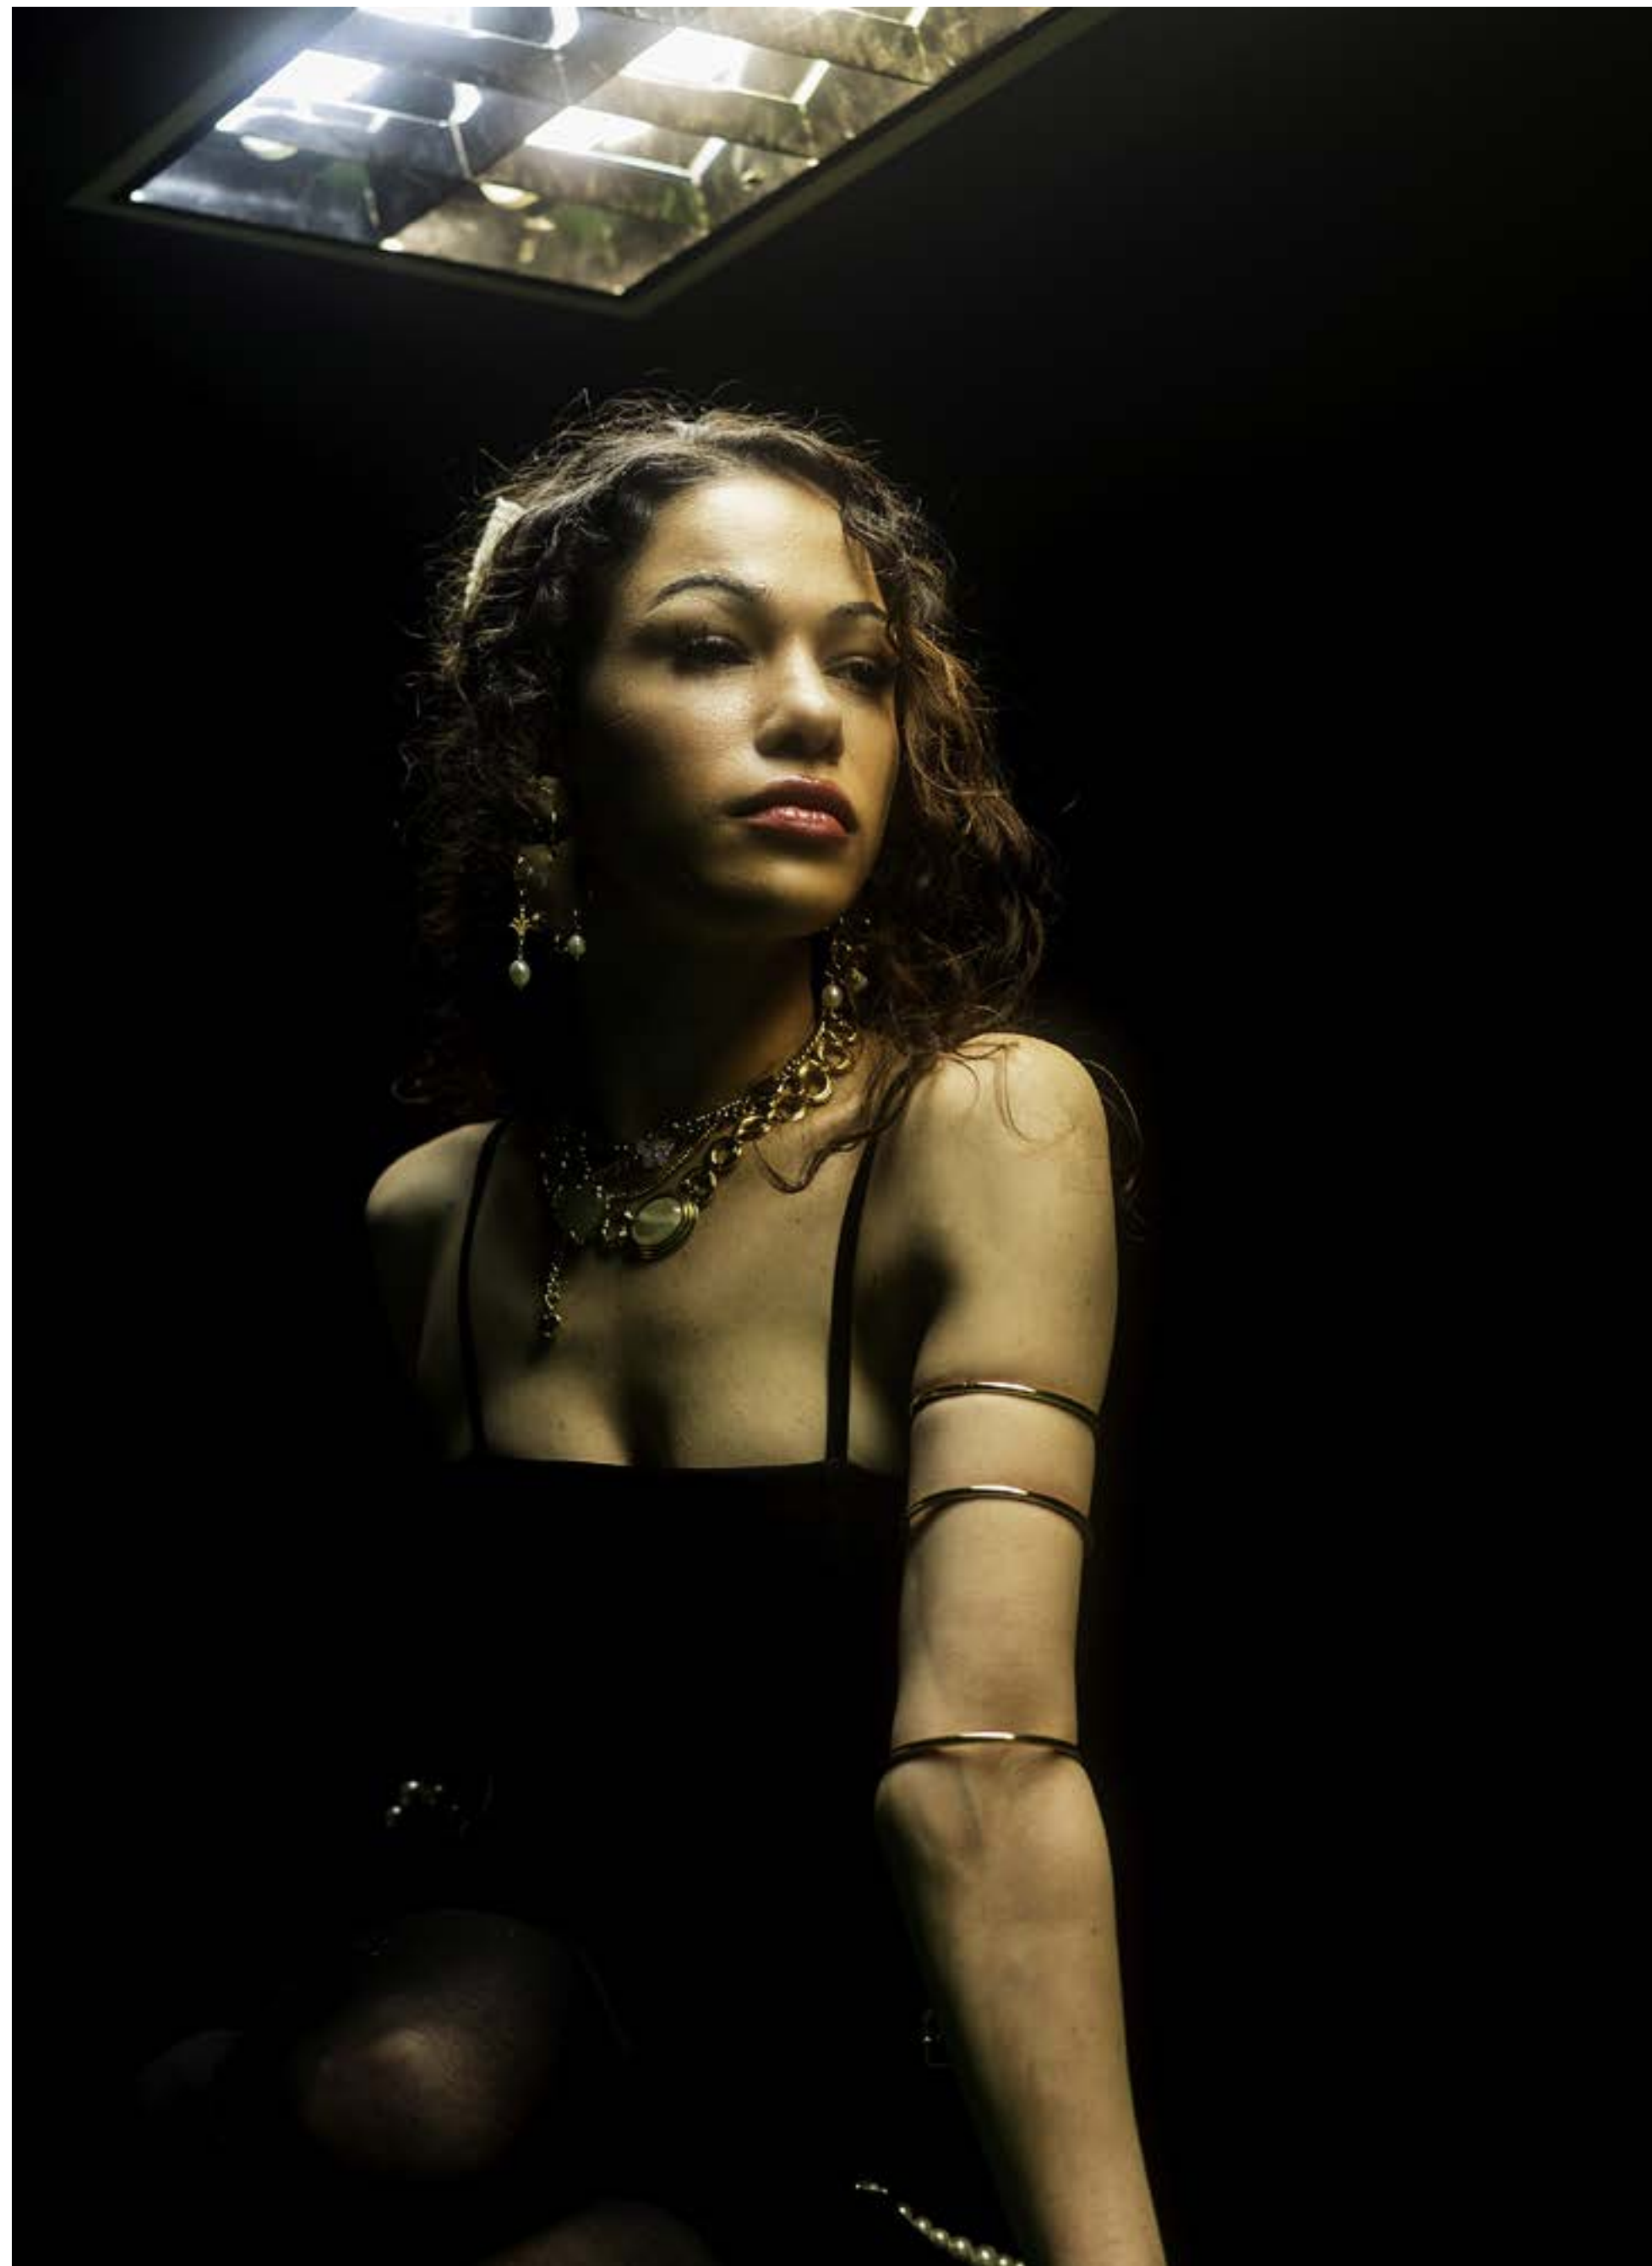

London turned into a stage of shadows and neon. Smoke in the air, masks everywhere, creators pushing limits. It wasn't just a shoot, it was a clash of styles, lights, and pure Halloween chaos. I showed up with my Sony, left with frames that feel like scenes from a dark movie. This is the kind of night that reminds you why you create: energy, community, and that electric rush of capturing the moment before it disappears.

Snowhill Skooker

Dim lights. Green felt glowing like a stage.
Cue hits echoing through the room while shadows cut across the tables.
Players locked in, focus sharp, silence heavy.
I moved between the frames, catching the tension, the precision, the drama.
Inside the snooker hall, every shot felt like a story:
one strike, one moment, one breath held.

Prague

I love Prague because it feels both magical and real at the same time. The Gothic and Baroque architecture is so beautifully preserved that every street feels like stepping into a story. The city's history is everywhere, the beer culture is legendary, and it's surprisingly affordable compared to other capitals. What I love most is the atmosphere, a fairytale charm mixed with a modern, vibrant energy that makes you feel instantly connected to the place.

Sardinia

Sardinia is the place I call home. Its wild beaches, warm light, and rugged landscapes shaped my eye for photography. Every corner feels honest, untouched, and full of the kind of beauty that stays with you.

Cambridge

Cambridge in winter feels sharp and silent. Cold air, empty streets, and historic architecture turning into pure black and white mood. Every corner feels crisp, minimal, and full of quiet intensity.

Dublin

Dublin City in winter feels cold, moody, and alive. The winds are sharp, the skies heavy, and the streets full of raw character that makes every moment feel real.

Lisbon

Lisbon in summer feels golden from morning to night. The light hits the city in a way that makes every colour glow, the yellow trams, the tiled facades, the warm streets leading down to the ocean breeze. There's a relaxed energy everywhere, a mix of music, sunshine, and slow moments that make the city feel alive and effortless. Every corner has character, every viewpoint feels like a painting, and the summer heat gives Lisbon a soul you can't forget.

Auschwitz

Visiting both Auschwitz I and Birkenau is something you should experience at least once in your life. Standing there in my 40s, I felt the responsibility to witness the horror with my own eyes. These places force you to remember, to honour every life lost, and to understand the value of the freedom we have today.

Milan

Milan in September feels like the city is waking up with purpose. The heat softens, the light turns warm and golden, and the streets fill with a mix of locals returning from summer and the energy of fashion season starting to rise. Cafés spill onto the sidewalks, trams slide through the afternoon glow, and the whole city carries this elegant, effortless rhythm. It's a moment where modern architecture, historic beauty, and Milan's unmistakable style all blend together. September in Milan doesn't just look good — it feels like a fresh start.

Wedding

A celebration of love in its purest form.

Soft moments, quiet glances, and the kind of emotion that lives beyond the frame.

Every touch, every smile, every breath becomes part of a story two people carry forever.

Drone shots

different way of seeing the world. From above, lines become shapes, colours turn into patterns, and familiar places reveal secrets you can only catch from the sky. These images capture movement, scale, and the quiet poetry hidden in landscapes when viewed from a higher perspective.
